

RAIN INTERFERED WITH ATTENDANCE.

Automobile Contest at the St. Louis Fair Postponed on Account of the Weather.

WILL TAKE PLACE TO-MORROW.

Prizes Awarded Winning Exhibitors of Various Classes of Horses—Prizes for Dairy Products.

Rain interfered with the attendance at the St. Louis Fair yesterday and caused a postponement of the automobile contest scheduled for the afternoon. The postponed event was a red-horse race, the only one of the kind held at the fair. With these exceptions the events of the day went off in first-class order.

Walk, trot and canter saddle horse and light harness horse were the center of attraction in the arena. R. H. Orthwein of this city having several entries. Among winners to the fair was C. H. Eddies, an assistant professor of dairy husbandry at the University of California, who won a prize in the judging of dairy products.

Colonel John T. Hughes of Lexington, Ky., is here with his stable of Kentucky show horses and was a red-horse figure in the arena, where he has displayed his horses for the last thirty-four years. Many old-timers were noticed among those in attendance.

Today's events include classes for hunters and jumpers, roadster races and saddle horse races, while the main feature will be the athletic tournament held under the auspices of the Western Branch A. A. P.

The following awards were made:

K. B. ARMOUR'S WILL PROBATED.

Widow and Children Share Equally in the Division.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 8.—The will of the late K. B. Armour was filed in Probate Court today. By its terms the wife is to have and share alike with the widow, Mrs. Annie H. Armour, and the three children, Andrew Watson Armour, Lawrence H. Armour and Mary Augusta Armour. In addition Mrs. Armour is left, without reservation of the former, with the residue of the estate. The stipulation makes an accurate estimate of the value of the estate practically an impossibility. When no public bequests are mentioned in the will, it is known that this was not overlooked by him.

RAILWAY ROAD MASTERS.

Western Men Read Papers at the Washington Convention.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The nineteenth annual convention of the Roadmasters and Maintenance of Way Association of America and of the National Road and Track Supply Association began today. Two sessions of the former were held, and the entire time was devoted to the discussion of papers on questions of railway construction. The papers were read by J. M. Meade of Topeka, Kas., and Secretary J. B. Dickson of Sterling, Ill., were submitted.

Those reading papers included the following: J. C. Hechler, general roadmaster of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway; J. C. Rockford of the San Francisco and San Jose Valley Railway; R. P. Belling of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway; William Shea of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway; L. Bradley of the Atlantic Coast and Santa Fe Railway; and F. C. Allen of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy.

Resolutions were made by G. E. Hayward of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, and C. H. B. of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha. The resolutions were adopted by a vote of 100 to 0.

The convention was held at the Hotel McPherson, and was attended by about 100 delegates from all over the country.
